

Learn from the great teachers in human history

There is no reason to reinvent health or look for something “new” or some new break-through cure. We can learn from the past, particularly those cultures that have developed healing systems and modalities that have stood the test of time. Keeping one's mind active by enlarging our body of knowledge helps us to grow as a person and keeps us in touch with the greater world around us.

{jcomments on}