Understanding Inflammation

Today, we know that inflammation is the root of many chronic health conditions ranging from heart disease and diabetes to depression, Alzheimer's and osteoporosis. Researchers have long known heart disease and inflammation were intrinsically tied. Tumors grow larger as the inflammatory process takes hold and cancers are perpetuated by chronic inflammation. It is also a key factor to skin aging.

This program is adjusted for the following conditions:

- Muscle inflammation and pain (fibromyalgia, muscle pain)
- Inflammatory skin conditions (rashes, boils, rosacea, etc)
- Join and muscular pain (arthritis, joint pain, back pain, etc)

- Nerve pain (headaches, sciatica, etc.)

Types of Arthritis according to Ayurveda

Based on Ayurveda, accumulated toxins in the liver and blood eventually buildup in joints, muscle tissue, fat cells, skin or other organs (depending on the individual) leading to inflammation and ultimately pain. The Ayurveda approach focuses on reducing inflammation (due to excess Pitta) and detoxing the body before addressing the pain with analgesic (pain reducing) herbs and external [oil] treatments.

- Vata type arthritis has severe pain that changes, migrates and throbs. The joints become stiff and crack and movement is difficult. There may also be constipation, gas, abdominal distention and lower back pain. nervousness, anxiety, fear and and insomnia.
- Pitta type arthritis involves more heat and inflammation, swelling, fever or burning sensations. Pain is resolved by cold and aggravated by heat. Symptoms often include sweating, loose bowel movements and irritability.
- Kapha type arthritis involves swelling and edema around the joint. Pain is usually localized, dull, heavy and aching. There will also be congestion in the chest and mucus

In Ayurveda, treatment protocol varies greatly based on the type of arthritis.
