Herbal Medicine Traditionally

Herbal medicine is the oldest form of health care known to mankind. Herbs have been used by all cultures throughout history. Apparently, primitive man observed and appreciated the great diversity of plants available to him. The plants provided food, clothing, shelter, and medicine. Much of the medicinal use of plants seems to have been developed through observations of wild animals, and by trial and error. The use of plants as medicine is older than recorded history. The knowledge of herbal medicine is one of humankind's greatest achievements!

Every man and woman, young or old, healthy or dis-eased, can benefit daily from herbal teas, tinctures and oils.

Herbal medicine includes leaves, roots, flowers & bark of plants taken in herbal capsules, teas, tinctures, tonics, salves and more.

Herbs have tremendous healing powers with less side effects than synthetic drugs when used properly. When added to your daily routine they can have profound effects on the mind, body and spirit. Herbs have been used traditionally by all people. It is my hope to introduce you to the benefits of coming back to a more organic way of living, by utilizing herbs and the healing potential of food as medicine.

Herbal Healing Today

Herbs are commonly prescribed by conventional physicians in Europe. In 1978, the German Commission E published a list of more than 300 herbs, noting research attesting to their safety and effectiveness, as well as possible side effects. Mostly people in “developing” countries continue to use “traditional” herb treatments daily while a large percentage of people in countries such as India and China rely solely on herbal medicine for all of their health care needs. In fact, about 80 percent of the world population still relies largely on plant-based medicine. The United States has lagged behind in its acceptance of herbal therapies and treatments.

Modern Medicine evolved from Natural Medicine: Chemical compounds in plants work by binding to receptor molecules present in the body; these processes are similar to western drugs in how they work, but in an unmodified natural state. Most conventional drugs are derived from natural medicine. In a modern age where we are inundated by unnatural ways of living and eating, re-introducing medicine that comes from nature, can help re-establish total harmony within you.

Why start taking herbs for your health?

- Many herbal treatments are very effective handed-down home remedies.
- Herbal medicine worked in ancient times and they still work today.

- Avoid harmful side-effects of pharmaceutical medication.
- Save on medical bills.

Why work with a professional herbalist?

- Each person will react differently.
- Everyone's digestive system is different.
- Packaged herbal programs cannot adjust for your individuality.
- Based on wrist pulses, tongue reading and symptoms, herbs are blended.
- A follow-up appointment allows for adjustments to be made.

Why use custom blends

- Herbs are not generally not used individually but in combination
- Rarely does one herb provide all actions needed.
- Blends will address the main issues and other imbalances.
